

Dear FCC. I'm an big fan of XMradio, since I've had it installed in my vehicle, I've never listen to local radio as much as I listen to XMradio, in my whole life, I have been listening to there stations for 6 months now! when I'm traveling or just going to work, I never listen to local radio stations, I've always played CD's or cassettes. what I like about XMradio, is it is very useful and has valued information, you can't receive on local radio, especially traffic and weather reports, and what's most effective about it, is the stations always come in clear, and your not having to search for stations when going farther away from your local serving area!!! XMradio is commercial free, there are alot of advertisements on local stations paid for by advertisers, and the local stations are not playing the kind of interest the general public is use to listening to! the information that is transmitted on XM is educational and informative, this type of radio service should have been introduced to the american public along time ago! I still listen to some radio staions at home, but when I'm on the road I have peace of mind knowing that XM is covering all aspects of interest, and also its a great driving tool, giving you information of what is ahead...I can't seem to find pleasure listening to local radio stations on the road, and my family relys on all of XM's content, and not only is XM informative it also serves as a teaching tool for young and old! XMradio should stay in existance, and I think the NAB should pay for XMradio for everybody so they could have a popular listening audience, then no one would vote against it.....I'mXM all the way!!!
